

Kristin Marshall – Biography

Kristin Marshall has assumed many roles working in immigration and refugee law, training and public legal education. Private practice, detention work with the RLO, and training (and facilitating mentorships) for refugee lawyers while at LAO. She has taught a variety of people over the years – law students, community workers, and immigration consultants.

She has worked at Community Legal Education Ontario (CLEO) over many decades, developing legal information for refugees and survivors of intimate partner violence. Recently she has worked on training templates for clinics to use and offered legal capability workshops for front line workers. Kristin completed an M. Ed. at OISE in Social Justice Education.

She just started a new position as staff lawyer with the Canada-US Border Rights Clinic, a new initiative funded by the Law Foundation to provide summary advice to migrants seeking protection at the border and legal information for NGOs working with them – launching soon!

She loves baking and riding her bike. 😊
